In relation to this article, if it is finally maintained, compared to article 47 alt, we would like to make a comment regarding our preference for paragraph 2 (e) bis, instead of paragraph 2 (e). The reason is the fact that an environmental evaluation must include consultations with the affected parties. Of course, you have to collaborate, but the process that involves them is called consultations. It is an essential element of the environmental assessment process. Through them, information is collected on important issues regarding mining activity.
